

Pigs At The Tiger Trough

By fitsnews • on March 19, 2009

The first faculty survey at Clemson University in over a decade garnered a 40% response rate, but that level of participation didn't mean people were happy with the University - especially its high-priced, ever-expanding administrative bureaucracy.

In fact, the report included hundreds of comments blistering President James Barker ... most of which didn't make their way into the scant mainstream media coverage the report received.

Some of the comments are downright vengeful, with words like "galling," "unconscionable" and "obscene" thrown out in reference to Clemson's recent bureaucratic explosion.

We're still trying to get a copy of the massive document online, since Clemson has (understandably) refused to post it on the Internet.

Stay tuned ... but the bottom line is there's a revolution underway at CU, people.

END

