

Where's The Tiger "Sisterhood" At?

By fitsnews • on April 8, 2009

First of all, we'd like to send a special "Thank You" out to the members of the 'Tiger Brotherhood' who have contacted us in the wake of our recent series of stories about the administration at Clemson University.

We've never been fans of "secret societies," but every member of this organization that we've spoken with has been a credit to Clemson University and has given us the impression that they are getting to the bottom of the current mess up in Tigertown.

They've also honored their organization's "code," providing us with a certain level of detail about discussions that have transpired within their private meetings, but refusing to reveal any information that would incriminate certain Clemson administrators - several of whom are members of the brotherhood.

While we continue to piece together everything that's happened, it's become clear to us that the "Tiger Brotherhood" has the best interests of Clemson University at heart. And while we may not see eye-to-eye on every issue with the various members who have contacted us, we respect where they are coming from and the way they are advancing the integrity of the University they love. One thing is for sure - the "Brotherhood" is every bit as furious at some of the actions taken by top Clemson administrators as the CU faculty is. Which is to say they're pretty pissed.

Meanwhile, in typical fashion, our founding editor has found a way to turn the whole thing into another of his perverted fantasies, saying "enough with the 'Brotherhood' already, I want to know where the 'Tiger Sisterhood' is at."
